Women's Writings in the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries: Taisha Abraham

This compact book on women's writings in English provides deep insight into the agitating the minds of the women writers of the period through four short stories. Reinforced by a comprehensive introduction and three critical essays, this book serves as an excellent text for the undergraduate students of English. Besides, any scholar interested to study women's writings of the period in depth and to know about the sensitivity and feminist frame of mind that moulded these stories will also find it useful.
